

*Sirdars as Intermediaries in Nineteenth-century Indian Migration**

Modern Asian Studies

51, 462-484

DOI: 10.1017/s0026749x16000238

Citation Report

#	ARTICLE	IF	CITATIONS
1	Some Thoughts on the Representation and Misrepresentation of the Colonial South Asian Labour Diaspora. South Asian Studies , 2017, 33, 7-22.	0.4	17
2	Between unfreedoms: The role of caste in decisions to repatriate among indentured workers. Economic History Review , 2022, 75, 421-446.	0.7	5
3	A Philippine "coolie trade": Trade and exploitation of Chinese labour in Spanish colonial Philippines, 1850-1918. Journal of Southeast Asian Studies , 2020, 51, 457-483.	0.1	2
5	Becoming coolies and supervisors: continued indebtedness, coercive intermediaries and new governmentalities in colonial South Indian plantations (1830 - 1895). Labor History , 0, , 1-18.	0.4	0
6	Indentured Migration, Caste and Electoral Competition in Colonial India. SSRN Electronic Journal , 0, , .	0.4	1
8	Indenture in Three Keys: Chinese, Indian, and Javanese. , 2022, , 55-112.		0
9	Caught In-Between: Coerced Intermediaries in the Jails of Colonial India. International Review of Social History , 2023, 68, 237-251.	0.1	0